About

A Signature MSU Event Advancing Innovation in Aging

Michigan State University's AgeAlive invites strategic partners to participate in a premier interdisciplinary forum focused on mobility, independence, and healthy aging. This annual Education & Research Forum convenes leaders from academia, healthcare, community organizations, and public systems to explore innovative approaches supporting aging populations. The hybrid format expands access across Michigan, connecting research with real-world solutions and strengthening collaborative partnerships statewide. The event culminates with the MSU AgeAlive Awards Ceremony (1 pm) recognizing individuals and organizations advancing aging research, education, and community impact. The event brings together the public, direct care workers, family caregivers, MSU researchers, faculty, and students along with community partners for discussion on aging issues.

Strategic Importance

As Michigan's population continues to age, mobility and accessibility are critical to maintaining independence, improving health outcomes, and supporting community participation. The AgeAlive Forum creates a collaborative environment where:

- Research informs practice
- Community needs shape innovation
- Cross-sector partnerships accelerate solutions

Sponsors and vendors help advance this work while demonstrating leadership in supporting healthy aging initiatives.

MSU AgeAlive is a university-wide initiative advancing aging-related research, education, and community engagement at Michigan State University. AgeAlive connects researchers, practitioners, and communities to improve health, independence, and quality of life across the lifespan.
